You don't have to provide copies of their documentation (actually, they delivered a two-inch binder containing them last week.) Just outline your knowledge of the opposition (who they are, what their issues are, contact you have had, etc.) and what you are doing to address their complaints. You can indicate that you have copies of documents from them and would be glad to provide them upon request, but you understand from discussion with me that this information is already on file.

Subject: Question

I'm going to just apologize in advance because I know I am going to ask you a million questions this week...)

I am working on Tab A and I want to make sure I don't get dinged for not properly documenting the opposition but I sure don't want to highlight it. Am I all right if I attach all the opposition documents in the appendix?

iks
Kim
